Then And Now.

The Western Brewer, (Chicago), has issued a circular containing an 'Act to encourage the manufacture of malt liquors, passed by the New Hampshire Legislature, Dec. 22, 1792. After whereasing that, "The manufacture of malt liquors in this State, will tend to promote agriculture, diminish the use of ardent spirits, and preserve the morals and health of the people." It proceeds to enact that all persons engaging in the beevery kind and nature that shall be assessed by the State"-and also have an abatement annually of as many poll-taxes as they employ workmen liable to pay the same. The act to continue in force ten years.

It will be interesting to have the workings of this law, and how soon the people learned that they had been mistaken in their estimate of the character of the business they encouraged. That they have so learned, is evident, for New Hampshire has now a prohibitory law. It is not apparent how the manufacture of malt liquors could be thought to tend to "preserve the morals" of the people, unless it was by keeping them in the same condition-preventing any increase in moral sensibility, if so, pickle would have been a better word to use than preserve. But that beer should enhance the health of the people, is a terrible mistake-as science is demonstrating, and as many have learned by bitter experience, without much science.

The following testimony has been published by the N. W. C. T. U.

That Alcohol is a slow poison, is an acknowledged fact. That its quality remains unchanged by any and all admixtures, is another fact. Men drink it largely diluted in beer, and manage to keep up a good outside show, while within they are getting into a sad condition. They do not know it themselves, for they poison their nerves continually so that they get no true reports from within. But let some accident happen which sends them to the hospital, and then hear what the doctors say about them.

Dr. Edwards says: "The diseases of beer-drinkers are always of a dangerous character, and, in case of an accident, they can never undergo the most trifling operation with the security of the temperate. They almost invariably die under it."

Dr. Grinrod, a prominent London physician, says: "A copious beerdrinker is all one vital part. He wears his heart on his sleeve, bare to a death wound even from a rusty nail or the claw of a cat."

Dr. Gordon says: "The beer-drinkers, when attacked with acute disease, are not able to bear depletion, and they die."

Dr. Nixon says: "Intoxicating drinks, whether taken in the form of fermented or distilled liquors, are a very frequent predisposing cause of disease.'

One of our own workers, on a recent visit to Bellevue Hospital, snys: "As we entered the ward, the first sight opposite the door was a surgeon dressing a gangrenous arm. His words to the patient, as we caught them, were, 'No I shall not let you go out; you would get a glass of beer, and that would kill you!" She continues: "A boy in another bed, motherless, friendless, a stranger in a strange land, speaking no word of ours, had received a slight wound which pure blood would have thrown off: but he was a beer victim, and his hurt, with his poisoned blood, produced erysipelas. Another had scratched his finger, and his hand was in danger of amputation. And so we went through the list, receiving testimony unexpected to us, almost unasked by us, and almost unconsciously given, that systems clogged with effete matter which beer had prevented passing off, were incapable of resisting injury and disease."

Some, if not all, of these, no doubt, had thought the beer was doing them good. Many boast of the good it does them, or of their being strong in spite of the beer. "I have drank a gallon of beer every day for the last thirty years," said a brewer's drayman, "and I was never in better health than at this moment." Yet lie, and he believed it.

the true state of things, then they begin to see, though often too late, what beer has really done to them.

"For they have healed the hurtslightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace."

Judge Men by Their Works.

A man is judged in this life by his works, and in this connection it may not be inopportune to add that Dr. Swayne has accomplished more good through the medium of his Ointment for skin diseases, than has the entire school of nevolent enterprise of making beer, "hysicians combined. "Its an ill wind that blows nobody good." What physicians have lost Dr. Swayne has gained.

It is reported that a party of Boston capitalists have acquired 1600 acres of land near Tuxpan, Mexico, in which oil of superior quality has been discovered in abundance. Machinary is now en route for the developement of the enterprise.

* "By asking too much we may ose the little that we had before. Kidney-Wort asks nothing but a fair trial. This given, it fears no loss of faith in its virtues. A lady writes from Oregon: "For thirty years I have been afflicted with kidney complaints. Two packages of Kidney-Wort have done me more good than all the medicine and doctors I have had before. I believe it is a sure cure."

Notes on Foods.

In selecting our supplies of food, it the very next day he died in a fit of is very proper to consider which will apoplexy. The beer told him that give us the most nutriment for the money. The lumbermen who go in-Men who are really well and strong to the forest, where they will have do not die off in that way suddenly. hard work during a long and severe When these beer-drinkers get into the winter, do not consult the books that hospital, and the doctor shows them show the composition of food. Experience has shown them that, as a main reliance, as a food that, in their rough language, will "stick to the ribs," which is another way of expressing flesh formers, there is nothing equal to > PORK AND BEANS .- No chemical analysis could lead to a better combination. In the beans the flesh formers are in large proportion to the heat producers, and as an abundance of both are needed, the fat of pork is added as a heat producer. We have not the data from which to make an accurate estimate, but have no doubt that for those who take active exercise in any occupation, the wastes of the body may be more economically supplied by this generally palatable food than by any other. Those who have not eaten pork and beans in a lumber camp, can have no idea of this food in its most perfect condition. The beans are first boiled, then placed in an iron pot which is covered. A hole is made in the ground, and a fire built there; when this fire has burned to coals, the pot is set in, and the whole, pot and coals, covered with earth. This is done in the evening, and the pot is uncovered and taken out at breakfast time the next morning. No wonder that the lumbermen are the sturdy fellows that they are!

> PEA-SOUP .- A pound of peas will make a gallon of soup. The peas should be washed and soaked in cold water over night, then be cooked in five pints of water, with gentle simmering. A pound of beef or a hambone may be boiled with the peas: for seasoning, add an onion with a few cloves stuck in it, salt to taste, and about forty whole grains of pepper. An ounce or two of sugar will add greatly to the richness of this, as it does to almost all soups. At the end of three hours' simmering, pass the soup through, a wire sieve or colander, with the aid of a potato-masher. Fry brown some squares of stale bread in lard or drippings, and add just before serving, or serve these croutons, as they are called, separately, to be added at pleasure. Beansoup may be made in a similar manner.-American Agriculturist for Aug-

Since the publication of Maculay's famous work, no history of England has more promptly and deservedly won the very highest reputation, than Green's "History of the English People." Ranking fairly with Maculay in the brillancy and interest of its style, and superior to it in its accurate delineation of events, it covers the entire field of English History, from the earliest to recent times, (and giving the history of the people, rather than the conflicts of the kings, only,) while Macauly's history is limited to a very brief period. Green was first published in this country by Harpers, in four octavo volumes, for $10,00, but The Useful Knowledge Publishing Co., New York are just completing a very handsome edition in one volume octavo, at prices raging from 65 cents for "Utility," to $1,00 for half Russia binding, and another edition in five charming and handy "Elzever" volumes for $1,30 to $2,50 per set. It ought promptly to, find a place in every home library, as, upon the whole, the best as well as the cheapest history of England. For sale by booksellers, and Club Agents, to whom very unusal terms and facilities are given.
